

This residential scheme in the heart of South Belfast encompasses traditional design with a contemporary twist to suit the modern lifestyle we lead today. The development included three townhouses and two semi-detached properties which blend with the surrounding Victorian style architecture, with their red-bricked façade and bay windows with reconstituted stone detail.

Mastercraft Construction undertook the entire project from acquisition of the site, through the design stage, and project management to completion in 2007. Some of the three storey properties' features included slated roofing with decorative contrasting ridge tiles, traditional framed kitchens and period style hardwood doors and skirting.
